MindShift™ Cards — Balance Your Thoughts

Instruction Sheet

Summary

Transform worries into balanced thoughts! Pick up a Worry Card, learn about the corresponding thinking trap, and write a more balanced version of that worry. By the end of the activity, you'll have a list of transformed worries.

Learning Objectives

Players will learn:

- Definitions and examples of the different thinking traps.
- How to challenge their worries using prompting questions.
- How to transform worries into balanced thoughts.

Set Up

- Place the Thinking Traps poster in a visible location for players' quick reference (ie. laid out on table).
- Lay out the "Worries" Title Card and the "Balanced Thoughts" Title Card side by side, and ensure that there is enough space below them for at least 5 rows of Worry Cards to be added.
- Place an example Worry Card and Balanced Thought below each corresponding title card. Example: I shouldn't feel anxious. / Everyone feels anxious sometimes.
- Shuffle the deck of Worry Cards and ensure that the marker and empty Balanced Thought Cards are easily accessible.

Required Materials

Included:

- Thinking Traps Info Poster
- "Worries" Title Card
- "Balanced Thoughts" Title Card
- 30 Worry Cards
- 30 Balanced Thought Cards (Lamination Required)

Not Included:

- Erasable Marker and Eraser

Instructions

- 1. Distribute a Worry Card and a Balanced Thought Card to each player.
- 2. Each player looks at their Worry Card and takes a few seconds to read the worry. Below each worry is the associated Thinking Trap icon.
- The player finds the Thinking Trap icon on the Thinking Trap Info Poster and uses the corresponding questions to write down a balanced version of the worry on their Balanced Thought card.
- Each player places their Worry Card and their Balanced Thought Card in the corresponding column.
- 5. The host checks each player's answer, gives them feedback, and starts a conversation with the group about each card pairing.

in partnership with funding provided by

©Anxiety Canada 2019